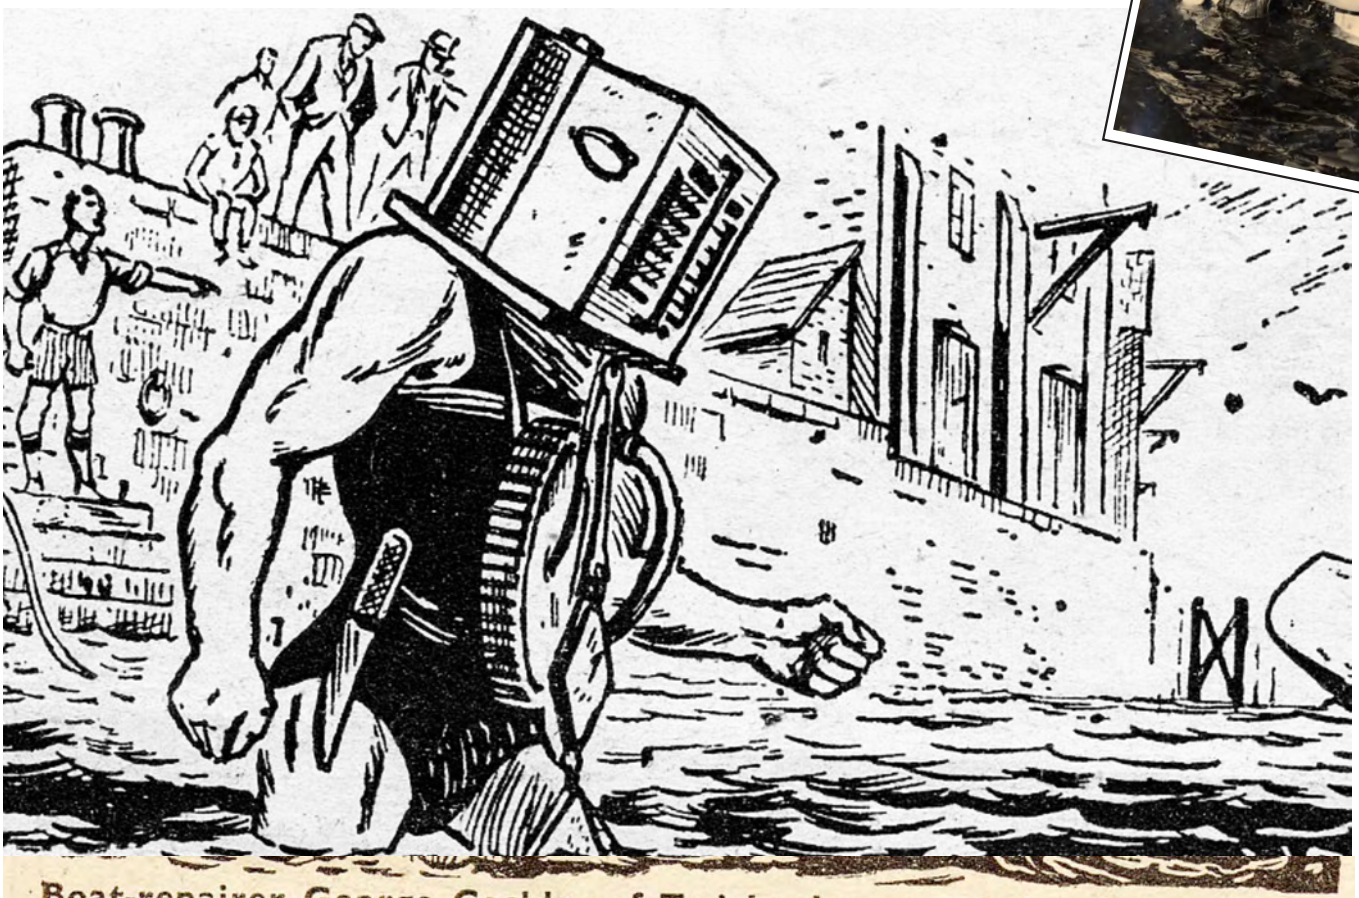
COLOUR IN PROFESSOR GEORGE COCKLES



Boat-repairer George Cockles of Twickenham needed a diving suit so that he could work underwater. He made himself one—and it didn't cost him a penny. An old oil drum serves as the helmet, and a car flywheel and two lead weights were hung from his shoulders to keep him submerged.

A SUPER "LION PICTURE PA

ION, June 26, 1954